III 阅读（共两节。满分40分）

第一节

阅读理解（共15小题；每小题2分，满分30分）（1687字，文章1121）

阅读下列短文，从每题所给的A、B、C和D项中，选出最佳选项，并在答题卡上将该项涂黑。

A

Lisa was running late. Lisa, 25, had a lot to do at work, plus visitors on the way: her parents were coming in for Thanksgiving from her hometown. But as she hurried down the subway stairs, she started to feel uncomfortably warm. By the time she got to the platform, Lisa felt weak and tired--maybe it hadn't been a good idea to give blood the night before, she thought. She rested herself against a post close to the tracks.

Several yards away, Frank, 43, and his girlfriend, Jennifer, found a spot close to where the front of the train would stop. They were deep in discussion about a house they were thinking of buying.

But when he heard the scream, followed by someone yelling, "Oh, my God, she fell in!" Frank didn't hesitate. He jumped down to the tracks and ran some 40 feet toward the body lying on the rails. “No! Not you!” his girlfriend screamed after him.

She was right to be alarmed. By the time Frank reached Lisa, he could feel the tracks shaking and see the light coming. The train was about 20 seconds from the station.

It was hard to lift her. She was just out. But he managed to raise her the four feet to the platform so that bystanders could hold her by the arms and drag her away from the edge. That was where Lisa briefly regained consciousness, felt herself being pulled along the ground, and saw someone else holding her purse.

Lisa thought she’d been robbed. A woman held her hand and a man gave his shirt to help stop the blood pouring from her head. And she tried to talk but she couldn’t, and that was when she realized how much pain she was in.

Police and fire officials soon arrived, and Frank told the story to an officer. Jennifer said her boyfriend was calm on their 40-minute train ride downtown—just as he had been seconds after the rescue, which made her think about her reaction at the time. “I saw the train coming and I was thinking he was going to die,” she explained.

41. What was the most probable cause for Lisa’s weakness?

- A. She had run a long way.
- B. She felt hot in the subway.

42. Why did Jennifer try to stop her boyfriend?

- A. Because they would miss their train.
- B. Because he didn’t see the train coming.
- C. Because she was sure Lisa was hard to lift.
- D. Because she was afraid the train would kill him.

43. How did Frank save Lisa?

- A. By lifting her to the platform.
- B. By helping her rise to her feet.
- C. By pulling her along the ground.
- D. By dragging her away from the edge.

44. When did Lisa become conscious again?

- A. When the train was leaving.
- B. After she was back on the platform.
- C. After the police and fire officials came.
- D. When a man was cleaning the blood from her head.

45. The passage is intended to _____

- A. warn us of the danger in the subway
- B. show US how to save people in the subway

We once had a poster competition in our fifth grade art class.

“You could win prizes,” our teacher told US as she wrote the poster information on the blackboard. She passed out sheets of construction paper while continuing, “The first prize is ten dollars. You just have to make sure that the words on the blackboard appear somewhere on your poster.”

We studied the board critically. Some of US looked with one eye and held up certain colors against the blackboard, rocking the sheets to the right or left while we conjured up our designs. Others twisted their hair around their fingers or chewed their erasers while deep in thought. We had plans for that ten-dollar grand prize, each and every one of US. I'm going to spend mine on candies, one hopeful would announce, while another practiced looking serious, wise and rich.

Everyone in the class made a poster. Some of us used parts of those fancy paper napkins, while others used nothing but colored construction paper. Some of US used big designs, and some of us preferred to gather our art tidily down in one corner of our poster and let the space draw the viewer's attention to it. Some of US would wander past the good students' desks and then return to our own projects with a growing sense of hopelessness. It was yet another grown-up trick of the sort they seemed especially fond of. making all of US believe we had a fair chance, and then always—always—rewarding the same old winners.

I believe I drew a sailboat, but I can't say that with any certainty. I made it. I admired it. I determined it to be the very best of all of the posters I had seen, and then I turned it in.

Minutes passed.

No one came along to give me the grand prize, and then someone distracted me, and I probably never would have thought about that poster again.

I was still sitting at my desk, thinking, What poster? When the teacher gave me an envelope with a ten-dollar bill in it and everyone in the class applauded for me.

46. What was the teacher's requirement for the poster?

- A. It must appear in time.
- B. It must be done in class.
- C. It must be done on a construction sheet.
- D. It must include the words on the blackboard.

47. The underlined phrase in paragraph 3 most probably means _____.

- A. formed an idea for
- B. made an outline for
- C. made some space for
- D. chose some colors for

48. After the teacher's words, all the students in the class _____.

- A. looked very serious
- B. thought they would be rich
- C. began to think about their designs
- D. began to play games

49. After seeing the good students' designs, some students _____.

- A. loved their own designs more
- B. thought they had a fair chance

- C. put their own designs in a corner
 - D. thought they would not win the prize
50. We can infer from the passage that the author _____.
- A. enjoyed grown-up tricks very much
 - B. loved poster competitions very much
 - C. felt surprised to win the competition
 - D. became wise and rich after the competition

A few years ago I had an “aha!” moment regarding handwriting.

I had in my hand a sheet of paper with handwritten instructions on it for some sort of editorial task. It occurred at first that I did not recognize the handwriting, and then I realized whose it must be. I finally became aware of the fact that I had been working with this colleague for at least a year, maybe two, and yet I did not recognize her handwriting at that point.

It was a very important event in the computerization of life—a sign that the informal, friendly communication of people working together in an office had changed from notes in pen to instant messages and emails. There was a time when our workdays were filled with little letters, and we recognized one another's handwriting the way we knew voices or faces.

As a child visiting my father's office, I was pleased to recognize, in little notes on the desks of his staff, the same handwriting I would see at home in the notes he would leave on the fridge—except that those notes were signed “dad” instead of “RFW”.

All this has been on my mind because of the talk about The Rise and Fall of Handwriting, a book by Florey Sire shows in her book a deep concern about the fall of handwriting and the failure of schools to teach children to write well, but many others argue that people in a digital age can't be expected to learn to hold a pen.

I don't buy it.

I don't want to see anyone cut off from the expressive, personal associations that a pen still promotes better than a digital keyboard does. For many a biographer, part of really getting to know their subjects is learning to read their handwriting.

What some people advocate is teaching one of the many attractive handwritings based on the handwriting of 16th-century Italy. That may sound impossibly grand—as if they want kids to learn to draw by copying classical paintings. However, they have worked in many school systems.

51. Why was the author surprised at not recognizing his colleague's handwriting?

- A. He had worked with his colleague long enough.
 - B. His colleague's handwriting was SO beautiful.
 - C. His colleague's handwriting was SO terrible.
 - D. He still had a lot of work to do.
52. People working together in an office used to _____.
- A. talk more about handwriting

- B. take more notes on workdays
 - C. know better one another's handwriting
 - D. communicate better with one another
53. The author's father wrote notes in pen _____.
- A. to both his family and his staff
 - B. to his family in small letters
 - C. to his family on the fridge
 - D. to his staff on the desk
54. According to the author, handwritten notes _____.
- A. are harder to teach in schools
 - B. attract more attention
 - C. are used only between friends
 - D. carry more message
55. We can learn from the passage that the author _____.
- A. thinks it impossible to teach handwriting
 - B. does not want to lose handwriting
 - C. puts the blame on the computer
 - D. does not agree with Florey

56. This picture book explores the life of a tree that has deep roots, long arms, and many children. She provides shelter for many animals and bears fruit. The author uses colorful, simple, yet detailed watercolor illustrations to convey her words. The charming pictures show the many aspects in the life of a tree down to the caterpillars that eat the leaves. It is good for pre-school children.

57. This charming picture book highlights the life of a garden, from planting seeds to harvesting. With the narrator as guide, the reader is led through a variety of free verse and occasionally rhymed poems that fill in the story of a garden and its inhabitants. The pictures, delightful watercolors in bright pastels, add to the whimsical feel of the poems. Young readers will certainly enjoy this fun and fanciful text.

58. This is a story from 1956 which introduces a little boy who likes to go fishing with a tree limb, a woman, and a pin. Although he never catches anything, on this particular day he finally does hook three big ones, but the little one gets away. The boy pulls them home in his wagon and his mother cooks them for supper. The swinging rhythms of the text and the good humor evident in the illustrations remain fun for the youngest readers.

59. This useful, attractive, oversize volume uses its height well, employing a tree metaphor to show the earth's various kinds of life and how all living things, from bacteria to the largest mammals, are related. Each spread covers one branch of the animal kingdom. To make the enormity of species understandable, Strauss equates individual species (e. g. , 10, 000 bacteria) with one leaf on the tree.

60. This is a story about how a grandfather teaches his eager granddaughter to catch speckled trout from the stream in springtime. After a whole day on the lake, only Grandpa is lucky. The next morning the young fisherman hurries to the dock alone, and soon she hooks the catch of a lifetime. Young readers will appreciate this story that celebrates the special bond between the older and younger generation, while brilliant watercolor illustrations capture the beauty of the natural world

第二节 读写任务（共1小题，满分25分）

阅读下面的短文，然后按照要求写一篇150词左右的英语短文。

Jackie is perhaps the most easily annoyed koala (考拉) at the Featherdale Wildlife Park in southern Australia. All the koalas there are unhappy and complaining. You would be too if you were used to night activities and someone kept waking you up all day while you were trying to sleep it off. That's right—sleep it off. The average koala is always half asleep because it feeds on the leaves of a special kind that makes it sleepy.

The reason Jackie and her fellow koalas are repeatedly awoken from their deep sleep is so they can be hugged and photographed by tourists, who make the trips to Featherdale and an increasing number of other national parks for just that special experience. Whatever department in the Aussie government in charge of such things is now moving to make the practice illegal, which is understandable. How would you react, my friend, if you were trying to sleep off a dozen times and some round, furry creature smelling of grass kept waking you?

* 考拉即树袋熊

[写作内容]

1. 以约30个词概括这段短文的内容；
2. 然后以约120个词就“该不该禁止游客和动物拍照”进行议论，内容包括：

 - (2) 假如你处在那些动物的处境，你会有什么反应；
 - (3) 你认为是否应该禁止游客和动物拍照。

[写作要求]

1.

在作文中可以使用自己亲身的经历或虚构的故事，也可以参照阅读材料的内容但不得直接引用原文中的句子；

2. 作文中不能出现真实姓名和学校名称。

[评分标准]

概括准确，语言规范，内容合适，篇章连贯。
